Ans:

Not many people know that before becoming famous J K Rowling had hit rock bottom so hard that she started suffering from clinical depression and remained suicidal for a long time.

After graduating from college, Rowling didn't have a successful career, her later life was followed by one failure to another. But she was struck by inspiration in 1990 and began writing the first Harry Potter book, meanwhile her mother succumbed to her illness and passed away and she was again left grief-stricken.

Somehow, she decided to rise above it and started refining her book's main characters, especially Harry who would go through the same traumatic experience (in the first book when his parents are murdered by the dark lord) as she did.

In 1992, she got married, but her marriage was far from being prosperous, she suffered domestic violence, mental abuse and had a miscarriage, although in 1993 she gave birth to a baby girl. Then after a year she separated from her husband and moved to Scotland. She took her child with her and her unfinished Harry Potter manuscript. She was now homeless, jobless and had a child to look after, it was this time in her life that made her think of committing a suicide.

However, she kept herself sane for the sake of her child and finished her book in 1995 and as if she didn't have enough problems, her book idea was rejected by more than ten publication houses.

But as they say when you can't go any further down, there is only one way to go, that is, up. In 1997, a publishing house based in London agreed to publish the book and that changed Rowling's life for good.

She is now one of the most accomplished writers of our time, and her estimated net worth crossed $855 million in 2018.

I have heard about the great war being fought, who started it and why, I don't understand. But people say it is having its effects in Madras.

The train that passes through the Rameswaram station has stopped make a stop. This has made my cousin's job a bit harder, my cousin Samsuddin delivers newspapers but now he finds it quite difficult to do so as the newspapers are now being thrown out of the same moving train that crosses Rameswaram platform and he needs someone who could catch the bundles and that is when I rose up to the occasion.

It was my understanding that I filled the spot perfectly, I could catch the bundles. It would help my cousin a great deal and on the other hand, I would start earning some money for myself.

Today was my first day, the experience was different. I felt like an adult, I earned money for the first time, it was exhilarating.

How did Wangari Maathai respond to the basic needs of people and endeavor to improve environment, as revealed in her interview to the Japanese NHK Radio.

Now, you prepare a script for a speech of Wangari Maathai's views and ideas of improving environment to deliver it on the occasion of 'Earth Day' in your school.

Ans: :-

Today we are celebrating the 'Earth Day' and I wish to invoke Wangari Maathai, a woman environmentalist of Kenya who founded the Green Belt Movement in 1977 and up until now, about thirty million trees have been planted throughout Kenya to fight the effects of deforestation and to prevent soil erosion.

If a woman from Kenya could start such a huge scale movement while fighting oppression than I think we can work wonders in a country like India. Plus, we have our government backing us, it encourages us to plant more trees and become better citizens.

Maathai believed in a cleaner and greener surrounding, she even said that planting trees was the true sign of women's personal freedom.

The Green Belt Movement was not just about planting more trees but it was actually about educating ourselves of our surroundings and how to take care of it.

Our environment is a blessing from nature and if we don't look after it, it will slowly perish and life on earth will end.

We have our future in our own hands; it is up to us whether we save it, nurture it, and cherish it or waste it; we need to make a stand for this generation and for generations to come.

[Q.17] Your friend is wasting time on playing cell phone games. Advise him / her not to do so. 1

Ans. You must have heard that access of anything is bad, be it eating too much or working too much or using smart phones too much for that matter. Using mobile phones legitimately is fine, even playing games on it too but when you start using it to kill hours of time then you have got a problem, a big one if you believe me. Not only you are straining your eyes but also cutting yourself off from the world around you.

I have noticed you have become more detached; you don't participate in social gathering; you have become aloof as if the people surrounding you don't matter. It's very rude behavior and it makes you look uncivilized and ill mannered...

You have two choices; keep wasting time on your phone or starting living a healthy life, develop a personality, meet new people, play real sports; I'm sure you'll find this more enriching than playing some game on a device made of plastic. Think about it, see you later.

[Q.18] Change the following into a polite request. 1

You to Clerk in the Bank: "Tell me how to fill the D.D. form".
